ALL NATURAL

Venue

How do technologies change our view of nature – and what does "natural" mean in the digital age? From October 10th to November 22nd, the KUBUS Municipal Gallery presents the exhibition "ALL NATURAL". Artists from Germany, the USA, and other countries explore the interrelationships between nature and technology, humans and machines, and reality and virtual reality.

Media art project

"ALL NATURAL" is a transatlantic media art project in cooperation with the Kunsthalle Hannover art association. The exhibition brings together regional, US-American, and international artistic positions and explores how technological developments change our understanding of nature.

The focus is on work at the intersection of technological feasibility and natural origins. This includes exploring AI-generated images and analog processes, virtual realities and immersive environments, biotechnological interventions and prostheses, as well as the augmentation of human sensory perception through technology. Human intervention in natural processes, ranging from preservation to manipulation, is also addressed.

Media art to see, hear and experience

For the exhibition, the KUBUS Municipal Gallery will be darkened. Experimental installations make natural phenomena and their technological and artistic transformation audible and visible. Visitors will not only be observers but can also become active participants in some of the works.

The exhibition will feature contemporary media art, installations, performances, and documentary formats. It is conceived as an interdisciplinary project that fosters dialogue between art, science, and society.

International artistic positions

Representing Germany and Lower Saxony are Ole Blank, Michaela Hanemann, Zhou Fei, and Ben Petersen. From the USA, Maya McCollum, Antoinette LaFarge, Wendy Li, and Vivian Li are participating.

International guests include Florencia Brück (Italy), Alex Long Yuan (China), Yumi Saegusa (Japan), and Nadja Verena Marcin (Germany/USA). Special events will also feature performances by Vera Frese (Germany) and Mario Alvarado (Mexico).

The exhibition is curated by Harro Schmidt and Michaela Hanemann.
